Ap jarvan support. Guide jarvan. Ap j4 support. Jarvan ap.

Now and again, professional League of Legends players in Korea will try something incredibly off the wall, only to make it viable. Then the rest of the world's competitive regions pick it up until it becomes meta. And finally, solo queue players catch on, and the once-strange pick becomes the norm even for them. Please, Rito gods, may that not be what happens this time. Jarvan IV, mostly known as a jungler and occasional top/mid, was taken as a support in the LCK today by Afreeca Freecs. It's painful typing this, but that wasn't even the strangest part. Not only was Jarvan taken to the bot lane as a support, but he was built as an AP champion, and it worked. Not only did Afreeca win with it, but they won with it twice. If this does make the rounds and enter the global meta, we can see a lot of solo queue teammates getting a little irritated. The results are a little misleading, though. Afreeca's Lee "Spirit" Da-yoon won both games against Jin Air Green Wings, sure, but it didn't go that well. In the first game, he finished the game with a fairly depressing 1-7 record, and then brought it back a bit in game two with 1-1. The pick wasn't OP by any stretch of the imagination, so we don't think it'll become the next jungle Ezreal or anything. It didn't work super well, it just worked. That's it. The strengths are sort of obvious, if you think about it. His standard has decent AP scalings, and it's super hard to dodge, so you can land adequate harass on lane opponents. It isn't incredible harass, though, just passable, and it isn't much more than annoying if you're on the receiving end of it. Spirit didn't exactly commit to building AP, though, because aside from the starting support item and a Zhonya's Hourglass, he started building full tank. Going full tank after that is probably a good idea, because after a certain point, the standard isn't going to do enough on its own to justify going pure AP. It's better at that point just to focus on landing your crowd control and surviving, and that's exactly what Spirit did. Take that as a lesson if you're going to try locking this in solo queue. Don't blame us if you get nonstop flamed, though. Frankly, we'd flame you, too. Here's my guide for all the details: has a lot of engage, peel, and utility tools which, in my opinion, make him a very viable support. He also has decent base damages which can make his early fighting surprisingly powerful. He also has relatively underrated skills, such as the armor shred on his Q and the attack speed aura on his E, both of which are well utilized by ADCs. I'm not saying Jarvan is an S tier support, but he should definitely be considered if Pantheon is. Jarvan's a really versatile pick and experienced players on him can make a lot happen. Anyway, look at my build and let me know what you think of it. Is it viable? Is it inting? I'm all ears. Tank-Get best Jarvan IV Support guide directly in your client! Get insights on win rate, KDA, and other metrics on your favorite champions! Jarvan IV Strengths & Weaknesses Jarvan's level 2 all-in is pretty good. Once he unlocks both his E and Q, he can look for a favourable trade. Depending on his build path, he can either deal a lot of damage, be incredibly tanky, or offer his team a lot of utility. It all depends on his build! This makes Jarvan incredibly versatile. His Ultimate R is really good in team fights as it can lock down multiple enemy champions at once. If Jarvan builds AD, he is going to be very squishy in team fights and will get blown up quickly in team fights. Once he's gone in, he will need to fully commit to the fight. To ensure victory, you need to make sure your team is in a position to follow up. If you go in without them, you're going to die. Peel, disengage and CC are J4's biggest weaknesses. He will be unable to use his E and Q combo effectively if the enemy can poke him down, reposition or CC him mid-combo. Game plan Jarvan IV is Average Keep poking the enemy with your E during the early stages of the game. As the game progresses, use the E to create a zone around which you can fight effectively. Try to roam around as much as possible. Your E > Q combo should quickly let you all-in any unsuspecting enemy laner and will allow your allied laner to follow up on the engage. Your dueling power will increase massively once you get your Ultimate R. Ensure that you use it to peel for your ADC most of the time. Jarvan IV is Strong This is the period of the game where you will want to work with your Jungler to get picks on the enemy champions. This will let you prevent a lot of skirmishes and will set the enemy team back massively. Roaming and helping your other laners to secure picks is crucial to winning the game. Make sure that you only all-in if you have your allies nearby. Else you will just end up dying. During neutral, objective fights, you must zone the enemy off the objective pit. If they get close to you, use your Ultimate R to stop the enemies in their track. Jarvan IV is Weak You should still focus on getting picks on the enemy carry when possible. Your E > Q makes up for a perfect combo, and you should try to knock up multiple targets with it when possible. Your Ultimate R will have a very short cooldown now. This means that you can all-in the enemy team frequently and should be able to secure multiple picks with your Jungler and other teammates. Your items should make you really tanky during this phase of the game. Be very careful, though, as you don't want to all-in the enemy and find that you have no form of follow-up damage available. Focus on protecting your allies first, then look for an all-in. His level 2 is quite an essential powerspike because he can now look for all-ins and knockup enemies with ease. Using the lane brushes for this purpose only amplifies the effect. Level 6 is another significant power spike as it allows Jarvan to add another layer to his all-in combo. He can also separate someone out from their team and can easily pick targets off Jarvan is quite oppressive in the lane. His all-in threat is enough to keep enemies at bay, and keeping the lane brushes de-warded will let Jarvan catch the enemy off-guard with ease. Once Jarvan maxes his first ability at level 9, he will be able to deal quite a decent amount of damage. His all-in potential will also see a significant boost depending on which ability he decided to max first. Getting level 11 is another significant power spike for Jarvan IV, as his ability to all-in enemies reliably will increase a thousand folds. It will have a reduced cooldown and will deal a heavier amount of damage. His ability to pick enemies off during this phase of the game is massive. He can try to invade the enemy's Jungle along with his Jungler and see if he can get some picks there. His all-in potential will be pretty potent during clumped fights as well. At level 13, Jarvan will have both his Q and E maxed out. This means that he can all-in the enemies more frequently and deal a significant amount of damage with ease. Bonus points if he can flank the enemy team. Once he manages to get three points in his Ultimate R, his ability to initiate fights will increase. With a short Ultimate R cooldown, we can expect him to be picking enemies left, right, and center. Jarvan IV becomes quite tanky during the late game due to his items and build. He can soak a lot of damage for his team and can easily peel for his carries if need be. Join other Jarvan IV mains and discuss your favorite champion! Jarvan IV tips and tricks. Jarvan is an early game dominant Jungler. Look to gank as frequently as possible to get yourself and your laners ahead. You can gank at level 2 once you've unlocked your Q and E if the enemy laners are weak and your laner has a strong level 1. Use alternative ganking routes to gank your allies. I know that Jarvan was briefly a cheese support pick by maxing E and building AP poke, but what I'm talking about is more of a Leona-Esq tanky engage/peel support build.
